Out of curiosity, who makes up the team deciding ethics/responsible?

*Are these people considering what is good/bad for people/patients/healthcare consumers? - or are they swayed more by the healthcare industry (professionals)?

*Are they open to democratizing healthcare for patients?

* Is this team considering the ethics/morals of younger people/upcoming generations, or are they using current medical ethical standards?

* Are they seeing what the rest of the world is doing about this situation? - and maybe even collaborating to make universal worldwide rules/guidelines, since we are now a global society?

Just wondering....
