I'm making this short and quick. If you think these companies will self-regulate themselves then you don't know US history or the present. These systems can have their uses in making certain jobs either but to decry regulation because of innovation is the laziest malarkey that just screams of receiving lobbying funds.

These companies operate on mass levels of thievery and a blatant disregard for copyright. Listen to the actual, working artists in these comments and not the ones that someone who built the system that steals their work claims to have spoken to. Side note; they don't talk to artists. They decry and degrade them for valid concerns and criticisms.
