AI should be banned from creative use altogether. Writers, artists and creative people in general will lose their job unless they're already affirmed in their field, and even if they're already affirmed they will have to ask less money to stay competitive. Ai should be use exclusively to improve life of people, like improving voice to text apps, voice assistants and other similar fields to improve life for people with disabilities and help people with their work. I'm aware that ai must learn from existing works, but It should also be regulated that ai needs permission to learn from people's works. If people don't want that their intellectual property is used to improve ai algorithms, they should be able to make that choice, and the platforms should ask beforehand, not set an option that allow this by default and if you don't want it you have to change it. I think it should be the other way around. Default setting should be "no".

I really hope that these concerns will be taken i
