AI in its essence is a way to automate simple human processes. It's to remove tedium in tasks that shouldn't require a human to sift through. Just like the other time saving inventions our race has created, AI will give us time to pursue higher purposes.

When AI is used to steal other peoples works including art, music, voice talent, etc, that's where it crosses the line. I Believe heavily that AI should be regulated in this regard. Art is one of the most beautiful things that we as a race can partake in. It's a reason to live in this world. When AI commodifies an expressive format and turns it into a soulless product at a click of a button at the expense of others who spent decades of their lives to master their craft, how can that be acceptable in any shape or form?

Please compensate the artists who make what AI is predominately known for in this day and age.
